

SOLAKONFERANSEN 2021 – 20-22 September

OFFSHORE HELICOPTER SAFETY

Driving continuous safety improvement in challenging times – safety and competing priorities.

A brief and preliminary introduction as of December 2020.

Stiftelsen Solakonferansen (The Solakonferansen Foundation) remains fully committed in its quest to promote flight safety by once again inviting the aviation industry to share their thoughts, discuss opportunities, and enhance aviation standards during our annual conference.

Whether representing an OEM, regulatory body, operator, or the end user, we trust you will find the conference an excellent opportunity to grow your network and solve challenges. Expanding year on year the conference will remain international and focused on offshore helicopters, unmanned aerial systems, and windfarm support operations.

As oil and gas continue to mature and seek new ways to remain sustainable and profitable, offshore helicopter transportation is not exempt from the continuous cost/benefit discussions in the industry thus the main topic of this year's conference "Driving continuous safety improvement in challenging times – safety and competing priorities". How should we as an industry ensure a positive trend within the realm of flight safety and where should we focus our safety efforts?

The program is structured very much as before with ample opportunities to socialize and network. This year's program introduces a static display taking advantage of the convenient proximity to the airport environment. Contributing aircraft systems are still being explored for the static but you will for sure be able see the AW 101, S-92, a variety of unmanned systems, and maybe even a super medium or special ops platform.

We work extremely hard to ensure the Solakonferansen remain the Flight Safety focal point within the industry and very much look forward to you joining us in September 2021 for three eventful days!
