

SOLAKONFERANSEN
— Aviation Safety
Since 1987

Solakonferansen 2022

Øivind Solberg

Solakonferansen remains fully committed in its quest to promote flight safety by once again inviting the aviation industry to share thoughts, discuss opportunities, and enhance aviation standards during our annual conference.

Whether representing an OEM, regulatory body, operator, or the end user, we trust you will find the conference an excellent opportunity to grow your network and solve challenges at hand.

This year we have asked the OEMs to focus on what and how they contribute to environmentally friendly operations within their segment. The oil and gas industry is carefully being watched in this space and many initiatives are in place to minimize environmental impact, the offshore helicopter segment needs to play its part and advance technology, operations and procedures.

The conference for 2022 is slightly different than before in that it will kick off with a get-together on the Monday evening with an excellent dinner on the conference premises preceded by a special lecture: Astorock – A Cosmic Voyage Through the History of Rock. The space age has inspired many composers and musicians out through the years. Familiar hits from Pink Floyd, Queen, Deep Purple, Jimmy Hendrix, David Bowie, and REM will be played together with spectacular videos and animations from space. You will learn about space activities, solar storms and the importance of satellites in our daily life. And how will a day without satellites be?

Over the next two days we will hear from the OEM's and offshore helicopter operations stakeholders, explore unmanned operations (military and civilian), get a glimpse into police helicopter operations, and we might get a glimpse into Mars helicopter operations.

We work extremely hard to ensure that Solakonferansen remains the Flight Safety focal point within the industry, and very much look forward to you joining us in September 2022 for three eventful days!

Øivind Solberg
Chairman of the Board
Stiftelsen Solakonferansen